Why Farmers Are Ditching Diesel Rigs for Solar Models

Bangladesh's agriculture sector relies heavily on groundwater - over 70% of irrigation comes from underground sources. But traditional diesel-powered drilling rigs drain profits: fuel costs average ₳2,500/day, maintenance eats another 15% annually, and emissions violate green farming initiatives. Last year, 3,200 farmers in Rajshahi faced fines for outdated equipment. Solar drilling rigs solve this mess.

The Hidden Costs of Old-School Rigs

Fuel dependency: 3-5 liters/hour for diesel models

Maintenance: 4x more frequent than solar rigs

ROI drop: 40% profit loss over 5 years

Solar Drilling Rigs That Slash Costs by 60%

Chinese-made SunPower SP-200X dominates Bangladesh's market with 850+ installations since 2022. How? A 5kW solar panel system powers 120-meter drilling at price per kWh 80% lower than diesel. Kushtia farmer A. Rahman reported: "My water access costs fell from ₳18,000 to ₳6,500/month after switching."
