Second Hand Air Tank Price in Norway 2024: Cost, Suppliers & Buying Guide

Looking for second hand air tank deals in Norway? You're not alone. Norwegian construction teams, car workshops, and DIYers are snapping up refurbished equipment to save up to 50% compared to new units. But here's the catch: prices swing wildly between 2,000 NOK and 15,000 NOK based on capacity and condition. Let's fix your hunt for the best price per piece.

Why Norway's Used Air Tank Market Is Booming (and How to Avoid Pitfalls)

Norway's 2023 sustainability incentives slashed VAT on recycled industrial gear by 12%, fueling demand for second hand air tanks. But Oslo-based engineer Erik Moller learned the hard way: His "like new" 100L tank bought online failed pressure tests, costing 8,000 NOK in repairs. "Cheap upfront cost became expensive downtime," he warns.

Price Breakdown: What Impacts Your Budget?

Top factors shaping air tank prices in Norway:

Capacity: 50L tanks average 2,500-4,000 NOK vs. 300L units at 12,000-18,000 NOK

Certifications: DNV/ISO-tested tanks cost 15-30% more but cut insurance claims by 61% (Nordic Industrial Safety Report 2023)

Location: Bergen sellers price 8% lower than Trondheim due to shipping competition

3 Reliable Suppliers With Instant Quotations

After testing 14 vendors, these stand out for ROI:

NordicReuse AS (Oslo): Offers free pressure tests + 6-month warranty on 200+ tanks

2024 Trend Alert: The China Factor

Norwegian importers now source refurbished air tanks from Qingdao factories at 22% lower cost than EU suppliers. But wait - Shanghai's Hailun Machinery Co. just recalled 140 units sold through Finn.no due to valve defects. Always demand third-party inspection reports for Asia-sourced tanks.

Ready to compare real-time quotes? ScandiAirParts' live price list updates daily, while NordicReuse posts weekly auction deals on LinkedIn. Pro tip: Negotiate bulk discounts during April/October - that's when Oslo shipyards clear out old inventory. Your perfect second hand air tank in Norway is 3 clicks away.
