Second Hand Air Tank for Sale in Germany 2025: Price List, Quotes & ROI Guide

Looking for a second hand air tank price in Germany? You're not alone. Industrial buyers and small workshops across Germany are turning to used equipment to cut costs without sacrificing quality. But here's the catch: prices can swing wildly from EUR200 to EUR1,500+ depending on capacity, brand, and condition. Let's break down what you need to know.

Why Second Hand Air Tanks Are Booming in Germany

Germany's manufacturing sector - the largest in Europe - demands reliable compressed air systems. With energy costs rising 25% since 2022 (Statista, 2024), businesses are opting for cost-effective solutions like used air tanks. A recent study showed 68% of Bavarian factories now include pre-owned equipment in their procurement plans.

Market Trends You Can't Ignore

In 2025, the average price per piece for a 100L tank is projected to drop 12% due to increased supply from automotive plant closures. However, high-demand models like Bauer Kompressoren units still command 30% premiums. Here's a snapshot:

50L tanks: EUR180-EUR420 (Ideal for workshops)

200L industrial tanks: EUR650-EUR1,200 (Used in auto plants)

Custom ASME-certified tanks: EUR1,400+ (Rare listings)

3 Mistakes to Avoid When Buying Used

A Berlin metalworking company lost EUR3,200 last year by skipping these steps:

Check corrosion levels: Use a borescope to inspect tank interiors

Verify pressure test certificates (mandatory under German BGR 128 regulations)

Compare supplier ROI - local sellers often provide better warranty terms than cross-border deals

Where to Get Competitive Quotations

Top platforms like Maschinensucher list 120+ verified second hand air tanks across North Rhine-Westphalia and Hesse. For bulk purchases, negotiate wholesale rates directly with machinery liquidators. A Dusseldorf buyer recently saved 22% by buying 10 tanks from a closing printing facility.

Pro tip: Always ask for the original maintenance log. Brands like Kaeser and Atlas Copco retain 90% of their
