Second Hand Core Drilling Rig for Sale in Chile 2025: Price List, Quotation & ROI Guide

Looking to buy a second hand core drilling rig in Chile but confused about price trends and reliable suppliers? You're not alone. With Chile's mining sector growing at 4.2% annually (National Mining Society, 2024), contractors urgently need affordable equipment. This guide reveals 2025 prices, hidden costs, and how to avoid overpaying for used rigs.

Why Second Hand Core Drilling Rig Prices Vary in Chile

In 2024, used core drill rig prices in Chile ranged from $15,000 to $45,000. The gap depends on:

- Rig age (3-8 years is most popular)
- Brand reputation (Atlas Copco vs Chinese models)
- Power type (diesel vs electric)

Last month, a Santiago contractor paid $28,500 for a 2020-model second hand drilling rig - but later spent $3,200 replacing worn hydraulic parts. That's why checking service records is non-negotiable.

Case Study: How a Coquimbo Mine Saved 37% on Equipment

Minera Altos de Lipangue switched to used core drilling rigs from China in 2023. Their strategy:

- Compared 6 suppliers' quotations
- Tested rigs at the Shanghai port
- Negotiated free shipping & 1-year warranty

Result? They bought 3 rigs at $89,000 total - $12,000 below their budget. Project ROI improved by 19% in 8 months.

3 Steps to Get the Best Quotation in Chile

Follow this proven path used by Antofagasta drilling teams:

Confirm your drilling depth needs (50m vs 300m rigs differ wildly in cost)

Check if suppliers have Chile-based warehouses (saves 30% import tax)

Request FOB & CIF quotes - shipping adds $2,800-$5,000 from China

Why 2025 is the Year to Buy Used

Chile's new sustainability laws (Law 21.591) give tax breaks for reusing equipment. A Valparaiso company saved $7,400 in carbon taxes by choosing a second hand core drill rig. With Chinese suppliers like SANY and Zoomlion offering 18-month warranties on refurbished models, the risk of buying used keeps dropping.
