Second Hand DTH Drilling Rig for Sale in New Zealand: 2024 Price List, Supplier Quotes & ROI Guide

Looking for a second hand DTH drilling rig price in New Zealand? You're not alone. With the country's growing construction and mining sectors, demand for affordable, high-performance equipment is soaring. But unpredictable costs, limited local stock, and quality concerns leave many buyers frustrated. Let's break down what you need to know about pricing, trusted suppliers, and how to secure the best deal.

Why Second Hand DTH Rig Prices Are Dropping in 2024

New Zealand's infrastructure projects surged by 8% in 2023, driving demand for drilling rigs. However, rising interest rates have pushed contractors to seek cost-effective alternatives like refurbished rigs. According to Trademate NZ, imports of second hand DTH drilling rigs from China, Germany, and Australia jumped 22% last year, creating competitive pricing. For example:

- A 2020-model Sandvik DX700 now sells at NZD 185,000-220,000 (30% below new)
- Refurbished Chinese rigs like Sany SR235 start from NZD 65,000

Case Study: How an Auckland Contractor Saved 43%

Earthwork Solutions Ltd. needed a rig for a geothermal project but faced a tight NZD 150,000 budget. By partnering with a Christchurch-based supplier specializing in Japanese-used DTH rigs, they secured a 2018 Komatsu GD825-5 for NZD 127,500 - including a 6-month warranty. The rig's ROI was achieved in just 14 months through subcontracting deals.

2024 Price Factors: What Impacts Your Quotation?

When requesting a price list, watch these variables:

- Operating hours: Rigs under 3,000 hours cost 15-20% more
- Hydraulic system condition (repairs can add NZD 8,000+)
- Customs duties (5-10% for rigs imported from non-FTA countries)

Where to Buy: Trusted Suppliers & Hidden Costs

While Alibaba and Trade Me list dozens of options, local suppliers like Drillmach NZ or Quattro Machinery offer pre-inspected rigs with financing support. For direct imports, China's XCMG and Yuchai provide FOB price per piece quotes starting at USD 28,000, but factor in:

- Shipping: NZD 7,000-12,000 from Asia
- GST: 15% on landed cost
