Second Hand DTH Drilling Rig for Sale: 2024 Price List, Quotation & Buying Guide

Looking for second hand DTH drilling rig prices in 2024? You're not alone. Over 40% of mining and construction companies now opt for refurbished equipment to cut costs. But how much should you pay? What's the ROI? Let's break it down.

Why Second Hand DTH Rigs Are a Smart Investment

A used DTH drilling rig typically costs 30-60% less than new models. In Germany, a 2020 model Atlas Copco ROC L8 that originally sold for $500,000 now averages $210,000. For small contractors in Africa or South America, this price gap often decides whether a project gets funded.

The Hidden Cost Traps (And How to Avoid Them)

Problem: A Nigerian contractor paid $85,000 for a "like-new" rig last year, only to spend $23,000 on compressor repairs within 6 months. Agitate: Cheap upfront prices can hide worn drill pipes, outdated automation systems, or engine wear. Solve: Always demand:

- Full maintenance records

- Third-party inspection reports

- 6-month warranty (common in UAE/China deals)

2024 Price Range: What's Fair?

Current second hand DTH drilling rig prices vary by depth capacity and region:

- Mid-range (300-500m depth): $50,000-$120,000

- Heavy-duty (800m+): $180,000-$350,000

China's XCMG and SANY units dominate the lower range, while Sandvik and Epiroc models hold premium resale value. A 2018 Sandvik DX800 with 2,000 engine hours recently sold for $287,000 in Australia - 42% below its original $495,000 tag.

How to Get the Best Quotation

Case Study: A Kenya-based buyer saved $18,000 by comparing 4 suppliers through equipmentmarket . Key tips:

- Verify working hours meter (minimum 80% match with documents)

- Check tax/duty policies - Brazil charges 18% import tax on used machinery

- Ask for price per drilled meter estimates to calculate ROI
