Second Hand Rock Drill Price in Germany 2024: Cost, Suppliers & Buying Guide

Why German Buyers Choose Used Rock Drills

Need affordable drilling solutions for construction or mining? New rock drills in Germany cost EUR15,000-EUR50,000. But smart buyers save 40-60% by choosing second hand rock drills. Here's what you should know about pricing trends and trusted suppliers.

The Hidden Costs of New Equipment

Last year, 68% of German contractors reported budget overruns from equipment purchases. A brand-new hydraulic rock drill averages EUR28,500 - that's EUR11,400 more than a refurbished model with same 90-110kW power. "We bought two used drills from Hamburg supplier and saved EUR19,000," says Bauer Construction project lead Karl Muller.

2024 Price List for Used Rock Drills

Current second hand rock drill prices in Germany range by condition:

Refurbished Atlas Copco models: EUR12,800-EUR16,500

Used Montabert HC88: EUR9,200-EUR11,750

Premium Sandvik refurbished units: EUR17,900-EUR23,400

Tip: Hanover-based LTB Machinery offers free quotations with 12-month warranty on certified units. Their March 2024 data shows 22% surge in used drill inquiries versus last year.

3-Step Buying Strategy

1. Verify equipment hours and maintenance logs
2. Compare price per piece across 3+ suppliers
3. Ask about VAT-free deals for export (popular with buyers from Poland and Czechia)

Supplier Case: How Munich Firm Cut Costs

Rosenberg Tunnel GmbH saved EUR31,600 by purchasing 3 pre-owned rock drills instead of new units. Their ROI came in 7 months through subway projects. "The EUR10,900 Sandvik unit performed like new," states procurement head Eva Schneider.

Germany's Market Shift

The Bauindustrieverband reports 41% growth in second hand construction equipment sales since 2021. Government incentives for circular economy projects now cover 15-20% of refurbishment costs. For price-sensitive buyers, this means better quality at lower rock drill prices.
