Second Hand Rock Drill for Sale in Thailand: Price List 2024, ROI Guide & Supplier Deals

Looking to save costs on rock drilling projects? Thailand's construction boom has driven demand for second hand rock drill equipment - with prices 30-60% lower than new models. Here's how to get the best deals.

Why Thailand's Contractors Choose Used Rock Drills

A recent survey shows 72% of Thai construction firms now use refurbished equipment. The math is simple:

New pneumatic rock drills: $5,000-$8,000

Second hand rock drill price: $500-$3,000

Take Bangkok-based TKT Construction. They saved 60% buying 3 used hydraulic drills from Chinese suppliers, recovering costs in 8 months through 3 infrastructure projects.

The Hidden Cost Traps (And How to Avoid Them)

"We bought a cheap drill that died mid-project," says Phuket contractor W. Chansong. This is why smart buyers:

Verify minimum 6-month warranty

Request video tests showing drill performance

Choose suppliers offering Thailand delivery + customs support

2024 Price Trends: What to Pay per Piece

Current price per piece ranges in Thai Baht:

Pneumatic models: 15,000-40,000 THB

Hydraulic models: 45,000-95,000 THB

German-made used drills now see 12% monthly price drops as Chinese alternatives improve. Brands like Furukawa and Sandvik hold value better - expect 5-8% higher price lists than generic models.

Top 3 Supplier Tips for Maximum ROI

1. Guangzhou Heavy Machinery exports 1,200+ refurbished units/year to Thailand, with free hydraulic fluid replacement
2. Bangkok's Siam Equipment Hub offers 18% discount on 5+ unit wholesale orders
3. Always ask for discount codes when requesting a quotation - most dealers don't advertise them

Last month, a Surat Thani mining company secured 17,000 THB instant rebate this way. Ready to compare deals? Local dealerships in Chon Buri and Rayong now stock ready-to-ship units - some include free drill bits worth 8,000 THB. Prices valid until October 2024.
