Second Hand Stationary Air Compressor for Sale in Australia 2024: Price List, Quotation & ROI Guide

Need an affordable second hand stationary air compressor in Australia? Prices start at just $2,000 AUD for reliable units - but how do you find trusted sellers and avoid hidden costs? We'll show you exact price trends, compare supplier deals, and reveal how factories in Sydney cut 40% on machinery upgrades last year.

Why Australian Businesses Choose Used Compressors

Over 65% of industrial buyers now consider pre-owned equipment, according to 2023 data from Equipment Trade Australia. The main reasons? Cost savings averaging 50-70% versus new units, plus faster availability. For example:

A Melbourne packaging plant bought a 2021 Atlas Copco GA37VSD for $12,500 AUD (original price: $38,000)

Perth mining contractors saved $7,200 AUD using a reconditioned Ingersoll Rand SSR-EP200

Current Market Prices & What Impacts Cost

Typical second hand stationary air compressor prices in Australia range from:

$2,000-$5,000 AUD for small units (5-10 HP)

$8,000-$15,000 AUD for mid-size industrial models (15-30 HP)

$18,000+ AUD for heavy-duty systems (50+ HP)

Key price factors:

1. Brand reputation (Kaeser holds value better than generic brands)
2. Service hours logged (under 5,000 hrs = 15-20% premium)
3. Included warranties - Brisbane suppliers like CompressTech offer 6-month warranties on certified units

Smart Buying Strategies for Maximum ROI

Avoid the "cheapest price" trap. Sydney-based engineering firm VentPro learned this when a $3,900 AUD compressor failed after 3 weeks - costing $4,200 AUD in repairs. Follow this checklist:

? Verify maintenance records (look for OEM parts usage)

? Test airflow at 100% load capacity

? Compare energy ratings - new EU efficiency standards could impact resale value
